"Acorn on the Oak is worth two on the foot." It has long been a disputed question whether the above familiar saying should be credited to Thomas Jefferson (peace to his ashes), or to Peter Balboa, the discoverer of the Pacific Ocean. It is not our province to decide the mooted point. But whoever is the author of the remark, the truth of it is brought forcibly to mind when some one, weighing about ... pounds, stands for a moment with the whole weight on their sumptuous feet on your pet corn. Family ties are for the moment forgotten, and one of a nervous temperament will render the air tropical by the warmth of their language. Pete was probably not in a pacific state of mind, nor Uld Tom in such a case care whether they let his poor old bones rest or not. N. B.—The case is not on record of one's ever having corns that wore the

DONGOLA BOOT,
(FOR LADIES), which are pliable, durable and easy fitting. Gentlemen, you may wear the finest broadcloth the loom produces, the sleekest hat made, and the whitest linen oppressed Ireland makes, yet you are not well dressed and cannot compete with the Lily of the Valley until your boots are polished.
TRUMBULL
is the national benefactor that has come to your relief and produced a that shines in wet as well as dry weather. Ladies are not so beholden as a man for the finishing touches to complete their "tout ensemble." All that is needful is to keep the boot soft and conformed to the graceful curves of the foot and

THE GARFIELD MEMORIAL WINDOW.

MR. CYRUS W. FIELD'S GIFT TO WILLIAMS COLLEGE.

[From the N. Y. Herald June 25.]

There was on exhibition yesterday, at the establishment of John Lafarge, the memorial window to the late President, which is to be presented to Williams College, Massachusetts, by Mr. Cyrus W. Field. This work of art, one of the best Mr. Lafarge has yet produced, will be shipped to-morrow and be placed in the chapel of the college. The cost is over $4,000. The window is pointed and measures 9 feet 9 inches by 3 feet 6 inches. It is constructed almost entirely of opulescent glass. The design is carried out to a great extent by the leading, and there is but little painting. In the upper or story portion, which occupies about two-thirds of the space, is represented the angel showing Moses the Promised Land. Aside from its pictorial possibilities the artist considered this subject in many ways fit. It was suggested by a sermon delivered by the Rev. Philip Brooks on the late President. The angel stands with Moses on a mountain top at dawn, and looking in his face, points with extended right arm to the Land of Promise. He is in the centre of the composition, standing slightly below Moses, who is on the left. The latter stands with slightly bent head, pensive, with his hands half crossed holding his draperies. The figures are about three-quarter life size. The composition is good and the poses dignified and excellent. In the sky above the pair, placed there for a decorative purpose, is a wheel formed of many colored glasses, with cruciform spokes, adapted from the "Wheel of Law" of Eastern religions. The coloring is rich and powerful. It is much more harmonious than in the Harvard memorial window to the class of 1860, and the work as a whole far surpasses that, though the first impression may possibly be not so striking.

The sky, passing from white at the east into varying and deepening shades of blue changes a little abruptly above the wheel—whose design seems not sufficiently clear—to green. The under robe of the angel is of light green above, turning to darker hues of the same color below. The upper one is of white, streaked with a violet red. The wings of white, with a web-work of green and purple, are very effective, and rival in delicacy of hue and structure those of the butterfly. Moses is somewhat gorgeously clad in an under robe of madder red whose hues vary with fine effect. In the outer garment green with hints of violet is the prevailing color, and in the lower portion the madder appears as if seen through the green. The contemplative pose of Moses is particularly fine, and the face of the light brown haired angel is very pleasing. The faces, though rather inclined to be russet, especially that of Moses, are excellent. The leading about the hair and beard of the latter is rather too strong, giving in the former case somewhat the effect of a wig. The leading, however, has to be rather strong, as heavy glass is joined to light. Behind Moses, near the ground, is some purple glass which seems decidedly too strong in color and out of harmony with the rest of the color scheme. The effect of the robes of the law giver is, however, though somewhat unnatural, very rich and effective. On the whole the draperies are admirable. The left hand of the angel, dropped at her side, is somewhat ineffective, the fingers being massed owing to an accident in the burning of the glass.

The principal and central object in the lower portion of the window, which in design is architectural and Renaissance, is an excellent and freely treated medallion profile head representing bronze of ex-President Garfield, on a light blue ground, in the classic style, and surrounded by a wreath of laurel leaves tied with ribbons. At either side, in small panels, are represented in many colors civic and military trophies. Below the medallion is an inscribed panel of gray, of which we speak further on, flanked by effective plain panels of light madder purple. This whole design is between pilasters of light blue, bearing arabesque designs jewelled and in many colors which support an entablature with a handsome floresque design. An outer border on all four sides is of madder purple or medium hue, while an extreme outer band of ohe runs all around the window. On the upper border of the design of the lower portion of the window, just under the story part, where the leading is at the angle of 45 degrees is the following text from Hebrews, iii., 3, being that used by the Rev. Dr. Brooks in his sermon:—"Who was faithful to him that appointed him, as also Moses was faithful to all his house." This is in Gothic lettering. The inscription below the medallion, in Roman, reads as follows:

JAMES ABRAM GARFIELD,
Twentieth President of the
UNITED STATES
Born Nov. 19, 1831. Died Sept. 19, 1881.
In memory of his SERVICES to the COUNTRY as SCHOLAR, SOLDIER and STATESMAN, and in token of the universal LOVE and SYMPATHY called forth by his protracted SUFFERING and untimely DEATH, this window is placed in the Chapel of his Alma Mater by his friend CYRUS W. FIELD.

THE USE OF TOBACCO.

[Dr. Deschamps in Galignani.]

My debut as a smoker was like everybody's. My first pipe made me very ill, and it was only by degrees that I managed to become a third-rate smoker—that is, I disposed of eight or ten pipes a day without inconvenience. But whenever I exceeded that average I suffered from violent sick-headaches, ushered in by indistinctness of vision, and numbness of one side of the face, the tongue and one arm, most often on the left side. These preliminary symptoms lasted about ten minutes, after which the headache came on in full force. The most refractory organ, however, was my stomach. After having smoked too much, I used to experience the symptoms known as pyrosis or heartburn to a very trying extent, though as any alkaline water speedily caused these phenomena to vanish I did not care to give up my tobacco.

About a year ago, having smoked for some months more than usual, I suddenly found myself affected by a peculiar and terrific pain over the region of the heart; in short, I had a violent attack of angina pectoris. It put a stop to my smoking, as, though I have since tried once or twice, I have always found my cigar or pipe detestable, and, to sum up, am radically converted. I do not wish to discuss scientifically the nicotinic origin of my sufferings, but am sure that they all sprang from the same cause—excessive use of tobacco. Degeneration of the cardaic muscle is often caused by tobacco. So long as the rest of his organism remains in good working order the smoker only experiences intermittent palpitation, and the grave injury done the heart remains unperceived until some trifling cause brings into relief the irremediable disorders produced by the prolonged use of tobacco.

STATE NEWS.

Aroostook.

The glorious Fourth is to be celebrated at Presque Isle, Monticello, and New Limerick.

Cumberland.

A smart shower and high wind struck Brunswick, Monday afternoon, about six o'clock, damaging shade trees, wrecking one small barn on the landings, tearing down a chimney on Maine Hall (Bowdoin College) sending it through the roof into the room below, and causing some other slight damage in various parts of the village.

Kennebec.

A terrific tempest passed through Litchfield, Monday, about 6 P. M., making a fearful havoc among fruit and ornamental trees and upsetting things in general. Among those who had stables and carriage houses blown down were Samuel Smith, W. G. Williams, Henry Huntington, and William Varney. People were frightened who were never known to be before.

Fire caught in the press room of the Augusta Journal office, around the boiler, about seven o'clock, Tuesday morning, but was soon extinguished by a stream of water from the hydrant with hose from the car shops. The loss will not be heavy, although there was damage on paper, machinery, boiler and by necessary delay.

Knox.

Eugene Anderson, a son of Capt. Anderson, of the sch. "James R.," of Rockland, fell overboard from the vessel while at anchor, Wednesday, and was drowned. The body was recovered by a diver.

Oxford.

The Norway Advertiser reappears, after a two months' forced suppression by fire. Its list was burned and hence it labors under great disadvantages in reaching subscribers.

Daniel Webster, while a young man, taught Fryeburg Academy and helped eke out his board by copying deeds in the Registry of deeds, the registrar being his landlord. The present registrar, Mr. Seymour Hobbs, is a gentleman of the old school, who takes great pleasure in showing the old books in which the great statesman used to write. It was here that he delivered his first Fourth of July oration. That oration, until now unpublished, together with one of Longfellow's first poems, also a poem by Whittier, and other bits of literature, all connected with the spot, as also pictures of the old academy where Webster taught, a picture of him as he looked when 20 years old, have been published by James R. Osgood & Co. Mr. Osgood is a native of Fryeburg, and is proud of his birthplace. It would not be a bad guess to say that it was he who brought Mr. Howells to that town last summer, and started the train of ideas that have developed into "A Modern Instance," now running in the Century Magazine. For it is said that the Equity of that novel is Fryeburg of to-day, and in the opening chapter of that story Mr. Howells has given an accurate description of the general appearance of this village. One of the villagers even went so far as to point out the family whose characteristics figure in the story.

Sagadahoc.

The cannon and shells are being removed from Fort Popham, and the old landmark will no longer threaten passing vessels with its bristling guns.

York.

Monday was "cure-all day" in Maine, and thousands of people bathed in the ocean with the firm belief that they will be cured of all humors and all sorts of diseases. It is a superstition or belief which has been handed down by the ancestors of the present generation, and it is believed and followed in many parts of Maine. Hundreds of people drove to Wells beach from the inland towns, Monday, and tried the efficacy of a sea bath. If it does not cure diseases the bath can certainly not have caused any harm to any of the people who have been seen along shore at that point.

A nine years old son of John Larrive, fell from White's wharf at Biddeford, Tuesday, and was drowned.

FREDDIE AND AUNTIE.

SOMETHING ABOUT AN INQUIRING INFANT.

To-day I sat in a car seat on the Lake Shore road behind a pale, care-worn lady, who was taking a litte boy from Cleveland to Ashtabula. As the little boy was of a very inquiring mind, and everything seemed to attract his attention, I could not help listening to some of his questions.

"What is that, auntie?" the little boy commenced, pointing to a heap of yellow corn.

"O, that's corn, dear," answered the care-worn lady.

"What is corn, auntie?"

"Why, corn is corn, dear."

"But what is corn made of?"

"Why corn is made of dirt, and water, and air."

"Who makes it?"

"God makes it, dear."

"Does he make it in the daytime or in the night?"

"In both, dear."

"And Sundays?"

"Yes, all the time."

"Ain't it wicked to make corn on Sunday, auntie?"

"O, I don't know. I'd keep still, Freddie—that's a dear. Auntie is tired."

And after remaining quiet a moment, little Freddie broke out:

"Where do stars come from, auntie?"

"I don't know; nobody knows."

"Did the moon lay 'em?"

"Yes, I guess so," replied the wicked lady.

"Can the moon lay eggs, too?"

"I suppose so. Don't bother me!"

A short silence, when Freddie broke out again:

"Fanny Mason says oxins is a owl, auntie, is they?"

"O, perhaps so!"

"I think a whale could lay eggs—don't you, auntie?"

"O, yes—I guess so!" said the shameless woman.

"Did you ever see a whale on his nest?"

"O, I guess so!"

"Where?"

"I mean no. Freddie, you must be quiet; I'm getting crazy!"

"What makes you crazy, auntie?"

"O, dear! you ask so many questions."

"Did you ever see a little fly eat sugar?"

"Yes, dear."

"Where?"

"Freddie, sit down on the seat and be still, or I'll shake you. Now, not another word!" And the lady pointed her finger sharply to the little boy, as if she was going to stick it through him. If she had been a wicked woman, she would have sworn. There are eight million little boys like Freddie in the United States.—Chicago Tribune.

About four thousand anecdotes have been narrated, in a recent publication, in which dogs have figured in heroic acts by which human life has been preserved, but we fail to remember a narrative which can be appropriately designated like the following. Now we do not mean to deny the truth of the many anecdotes such as we have mentioned, but we will say that of our personal knowledge we know none such. We had a dog once that saved things—a good many things, too—but there wasn't a life among them. He kept his things under a summer kitchen of ours, and his hiding place wasn't discovered for a long time; not, indeed, until it became necessary to tear up the kitchen floor to find a good place to deposit some chloride of lime; then we found out what had been "saved by a dog." There were a couple of kittens, a cat, two or three rats, and a chicken, all dead, very dead; a large assortment of bones, the remnants of an ottomon, for the theft of which the best hired girl we ever had, had been discharged; a couple of teaspoons, a goblet, an old hoop-skirt, a lot of tin cans, a canary bird, a plaster of Paris pigeon, and a cook book.—Cincinnati Saturday Night.

There are so many uncertainties connected with the hay harvest, as with every other farm operation, that the only safe way to secure the best results is to calculate on more or less delay, and so begin haying a little before the grass is fully grown. As a rule the loss and depreciation comes upon the grass that stands late. On our own farm, with so many crops grown especially for forage, the hay season begins early in June and lasts till November, and we sometimes have to use about all the good hay weather there is between these dates. There is one advantage in early cutting which many do not seem to fully realize. Early cut hay is injured very much less by bad weather while curing than that which is fully ripe. The green grass is so full of the rich gums and juices, that it sheds water like a cabbage leaf, while grass that has stood till it has become dry and woody has lost its waterproof character and absorbs the rain and dew like a sponge. Men may be deceived too, in estimating the quantity of hay upon a field cut early or late. The late cut, ripe hay becomes stiff and woody and rolls up into large winrows perhaps, but may not weigh in proportion to its bulk. Early cut hay will pack very solid in the mow, and a given number of cubic feet would spend better in feeding, except from the fact that cattle will eat more of what they like than of what is not particularly palatable.

If Mr. Sanborn's experiments are not misleading, their results may afford a degree of comfort to those who are unavoidably delayed with their haying. It is consoling to be told that late cut hay is better than early cut, when from any cause early cutting becomes impracticable. Our advice this year will be like that of former years, begin to cut early and endeavor to finish before the grass is injured by over ripeness. Mow freely in dull weather so as to be ready to push the curing when the sky is clear. Those who never mow except when the weather is promising are generally late in finishing, providing they have much to cut. A storm or shower injures green grass very little. If it has already stood too long it may depreciate as much by standing as if cut.

Sawdust, if dry, is a good absorbent for manure. Some kinds of wood are better than others. Those which decay soonest are best. If green or wet, it is of very little value as an absorbent. It will give off the matter which it absorbs as well as straw. Sawdust in manure, if some fermentation has taken place, is acquiring a high reputation in some parts of England, especially for celery and other garden vegetables. If dry, it does not injure the feet of cattle.

BOUTELLE & BURR, PROPRIETORS.

All business letters should be addressed to Boutelle & Burr, and communications intended for publication should be addressed: "Editor of Whig and Courier."

For Governor:

OF GORHAM.

FOR REPRESENTATIVES TO CONGRESS:
THOMAS B. REED, of Portland.
NELSON DINGLEY, Jr., of Lewiston.
CHARLES A. BOUTELLE, of Bangor.
SETH L. MILLIKEN, of Belfast.

GEN. ANDERSON'S DECLINATION.

The Argus of Thursday publishes, without a word of comment, the following remarkable and significant letter of Gen. Samuel J. Anderson, repeating his declination to be a candidate for Congress on the Fusion ticket:

To Messrs. E. C. Spinney, F. B. Torrey, John M. Adams, Committee.

Gentlemen—Your courteous letter informing me of my nomination by the Democratic State Convention which yesterday assembled at Lewiston, as a candidate for Representative to the Federal Congress, has been received.

It is with the deepest regret that I now through you decline this honorable position, as I am, by force of circumstance, over which I have no control, compelled to do. Twice already I have been, with great reluctance, a candidate in the First District, and faithfully put forth my best efforts to accomplish a successful result. At the first election the opposition to the Republican party was divided and the Republican candidate had an easily won victory. At the next election I received the nomination of both the Democratic and the National Greenback parties, was honestly and cordially supported by both and received, as I believe, a plurality of the honest votes of the District.

Since that time I have never consented to be a candidate; replying to all inquiries upon the subject that "I did not know as the people would want me, and that if they did, I was very doubtful whether my business affairs and my want of pecuniary means would allow of my accepting the position." Why I could not be more explicit was because there seemed a strong probability that certain pending matters of great moment to the business interests confided to my care, would be disposed of in season for me to take an active part in the canvass of the State. And secondly because it seemed to me that the importance of the Congressional contest would induce the Democratic Congressional Committee to give assurance before this time, of pecuniary aid sufficient to meet a part, at least, of the legitimate expenses of the campaign.

Had my expectations in this respect been realized I would most gladly have taken the position in the line assigned me by my fellow Democrats and have made the campaign as warm as possible. But, when in both respects I was disappointed; while I found the Republican managers were preparing by forced assessments upon the office holders of the State and from other sources to procure a fund too large for only legitimate election expenses; and when it appeared probable that the State Convention would select the nominees, although it had been generally understood in this locality that they were to be selected by District Conventions, I at once gave notice of my inability to accept the nomination it tendered to me by the Convention, actuated only by the most conscientious convictions of duty to myself, my business associates and to the Democratic party of Maine.

Through you, let me express to the members who composed the Convention, my appreciation of the honor conferred upon me, and to venture the hope that the explanation of motives which have influenced my action in this matter, thus hastily sketched, may prove acceptable to them. The reasons given for my action are of a personal nature entirely and have no reference to the probable success or defeat of the ticket. Upon that point allow me to say that I believe a majority of the voters in this State are opposed to the election of the Republican nominees, and that by a cordial union of the Democratic and Greenback parties and a thorough organization Gov. Plaisted and the four Representatives can be triumphantly elected—and I say this after a thoughtful consideration and careful weighing of all the influences that will be brought to bear upon the judgment of the voters of the State.

I am, with great respect,
Your obedient servant,
SAM. J. ANDERSON.

Portland, June 28th, 1882.

Certainly there have been few instances where so experienced and shrewd a politician as Gen. Anderson has so frankly stated his reasons for declining a candidacy. His letter substantially places his declination on three grounds: First, that his business interests and pecuniary means render it undesirable; second, that the Democratic Congressional Committee has failed to "give assurance of pecuniary aid" to meet the expenses of the campaign; and, third, that the State Convention assumed to nominate the Congressional candidates, although it had been "generally understood" that they were to be made later by district Conventions.

After those explicit statements there is a decidedly Pickwickian flavor to Gen. Anderson's mild and guarded assurance that his action has "no reference to the probable success or defeat of the ticket;" and this faint denial is not strengthened by his further expression of a belief that under certain specified conditions that do not exist, the success of the Fusion ticket might be possible.

We do not wonder that the Argus was unable to make any comment on the letter. If the announcement at Lewiston of Gen. Anderson's declination fell like a wet blanket on the Democratic Convention, the letter which we print to-day will have the effect of buckets of cold water upon the already lukewarm Democratic campaign.

The Boston Advertiser is troubled because the Maine Republicans said nothing in their platform touching civil service reform. But it will find a plank of this description in the Fusion platform, which means no more than would a reference to the decalogue. Let the Fusionists get control of every branch of the State Government in Maine, and every Republican officeholder would have to walk the plank. The Republicans of Maine have put their reform into their candidates rather than their platform. Massachusetts Republicans would do well to copy their example. Concord Monitor.

The Boston Journal says: "As to the platform, [of the recent Maine Democratic Convention] it is a charity to suppose that it has been mangled in transmission, for it presents an awful wreck of the Queen's English, to say nothing of a noticeable absence of logic and good sense. Enough of it can be made out to show that it was framed more with regard to rhetoric than to definite issues, and it has a faint interest as a specimen of slovenly political workmanship.

The past decade the number of farms in Maine has increased eight per cent. The number of farms in Maine is 64,309.

ANOTHER DEMOCRATIC MISFORTUNE.

[From the N. Y. Tribune.]

A fresh misfortune has overtaken the Democrats of Maine. The leading Prohibitionists of the State have decided that it will be for the best interests of their party to support the Republican candidate for Governor, Colonel Robie. Although they have not said as much formally, that is practically what their decision amounts to. A meeting of "all friends of Temperance in Maine, who believe in the rigid enforcement of the Maine Law, and are willing to act together regardless of party affiliation," was called immediately after the adjournment of the Republican Convention, to meet at Portland on Saturday last. About thirty prominent Prohibitionists were present. General Neal Dow offered a resolution approving the Republican State ticket and recommending it to the support of all friends of prohibition. He supported this warmly, and an animated discussion followed. While nearly all present were willing to support Colonel Robie, there were some who were not willing to approve other candidates on the ticket. The resolution was not adopted, therefore, but after a discussion of two hours the meeting adjourned sine die without action. General Dow interprets this result as a declaration by the Temperance leaders of Maine that they find no occasion for independent action in the present situation.

This wise conclusion is due largely to General Dow's good sense. He knew that Colonel Robie had always been a consistent Prohibitionist, and that his party would only impeach its own sincerity by refusing to support him and running a separate ticket which could have no other effect than to help the Democratic party. The wisdom of this course is demonstrated already by the wrath of the Democrats. Their newspapers are in a painful condition of mind about General Dow. One editor says he received a letter from a respected correspondent only a few days before the Prohibition meeting in which the statement was made that "Mr. Dow must be in his dotage." He struck the sentence out and published the letter without it, thinking it was "too harsh." He is sorry he did it now, for "in view of the position Mr. Dow took on Saturday, he has either lost his mental grip, or he exhibits himself as quite regardless of principle or consistency." The editor is even sad about the future of the Temperance cause, and is afraid it will perish. The idea of a Democrat weeping over a disappearance like that is very moving. General Dow has evidently hit the bibulous Democracy in a tender spot.

UNENTHUSIASTIC INDORSEMENTS.

The Commercial cautiously remarks that "the ticket nominated by the Greenback "County Convention yesterday is in the "main a good one."

In a similar unimpassioned manner the Camden Herald, (Fusion Greenback organ) says of candidate Murch:

"Our own opinion is that four years in Congress, it being a very corrupt place, is long enough for any man, and that it would be very much better for the people to send others from their own ranks instead of electing men a fifth time, for there are plenty of men smart enough and able enough in every way to fill the place, but think the office should seek the man and not the man the office, and can't afford to hire steamboats to fill up a convention. As a matter of expediency, it may be well to give Mr. Murch a renomination for the third term. We regret that he has not more ability as a debater and off hand public speaker, so as to be able to warn the Republicans oftener. In order to accomplish much in Congress a man has got to be smart."

The Boston Globe makes a great pretence of being a Greenback organ but it forgot its cue and in approving the recent Democratic Convention, asked: "Is there any reason, then, why Maine should not "keep her place in the Democratic column?" The Greenbackers who left the Republican party without any idea of becoming Democrats, will help to answer that question in September.

The largest telescope ever designed is now in process of construction at the works of Alvah Clark & Sons, at Cambridgeport, Mass. The instrument is intended for use at the Lick Observatory, California and will cost $50,000. It will have a 30-inch object glass. The largest one previously designed was a 30-inch glass for the Pultowa observatory, Russia. The Government observatory at Washington has a 26-inch instrument.

MR. BLAINE'S NEW HOUSE.

[Washington Letter to Philadelphia Times.]

Mr. Blaine's new house, although began a year ago, will not be entirely completed before November. He and his family hope to occupy it next winter, and Mrs. Blaine intends to have two receptions each week, one by day and one in the evening. I had the pleasure of visiting the house lately with the architect, Mr. Frazer, formerly of Philadelphia. The situation is unexceptionable, as the lot is bounded by three streets—Massachusetts avenue, P and Twentieth streets. The main front is on the latter, looking directly east on Dupont Circle, around which so many handsome buildings have been put up within a few years. The Massachusetts avenue circles (the other two being Thomas and Scott Circles) all of which are between Fourteenth and Twentieth streets, bid fair to be the most picturesque neighborhoods for private residences to be found in any city. They are evidently preferred by Senators and ex-Senators, who are in the majority in each locality.

Mr. Blaine's house has three stories above a high basement and cost $60,000. In addition to the main entrance on Twentieth street, which is approached by a grand double stone staircase and has a door way ornamented with terra cotta work in red, the house being red brick, there is a fine porte-cochere on the Massachusetts avenue side, through which the house is also entered. This residence is admirably adapted for entertaining. The whole first floor, consisting of five rooms and two halls at right angles with each other, the longer one fifteen feet wide and that from which the spacious oaken stairway ascends twenty feet wide, can be thrown into one apartment. The main hall has a fire-place at one end; opposite the entrance and near the latter a picturesque feature will be four graceful oaken columns.

There are a reception room, parlor, drawing room, dining room and library on this floor. The first two are to be finished in black walnut, the latter in mahogany, while the halls have ceilings of paneled oak, and are to be wainscoted in paneled oak all the way to the top of the house. The drawing room, dining room and library each measure twenty by twenty-five feet. The other rooms on this floor are a trifle smaller.

The staircase will be lighted by beautiful stained glass windows. There are fully seventy-five plate glass windows in the house. Every room has an open fire-place, and there is also to be steam heat throughout the house. There are three bath rooms on the second floor, one of them, which is as nicely fitted up as the others, is for the use of the servants. In one of the others a Russian bath is being constructed in addition to the usual style of large bath tub. All the second floor is finished in poplar wood. The basement, which has ceilings ten feet high, has in addition to pantries, laundry, kitchen, wine closet, provision closet (which last is on the north side, under the outer staircase, and will always be cool), furnace room, linen room and a large billiard room. The hall in the basement is wainscoted with Georgia pine. There is a dumb waiter and an elevator for baggage, coal and wood, but none for passengers.

THE UNIVERSALISTS

Closing Exercises.

AUGUSTA, June 29. The Universalist State Convention closed this evening with a praise and social meeting. At a business meeting in the forenoon Rev. C. P. Nash, of Bath, offered resolutions of thanks to the people of Augusta, and to railway companies and other lines of travel.

Rev G. L. Demarest, D.D., of Manchester, Secretary of the General Convention of the United States, who has been visiting Conventions for the past six weeks gave an interesting and hopeful account of the work of his church in various states and stated that Universalism was prospering out. Mrs. G. W. Quimby pledged $50 in behalf of the Women's Centenary Association, to the Missionary fund.

The Committee on Nominations not being able to present a place of meeting for next year the matter will be attended to later by the Executive Committee.

A collection in aid of indigent ministers and others was taken up and the plates were heaped with silver and greenbacks.

Rev. G. L. Demarest then preached an excellent sermon from Mark, 1:15—"Repent ye, and believe the Gospel." The attendance at the afternoon service was large although many of the delegates and visitors returned home on the afternoon trains. Rev. C. F. Churchill, of New Hampshire, read a chapter from the New Testament, and Rev S. P. Smith, of Marblehead, Mass., made the invocation. A sermon was delivered by Rev. W. H. Jewell, of Bango, and was on Man's Divine Sonship. The Convention which has just closed has been one of the most profitable and largely attended ever held in the State.

THE PRISONER READY TO MEET HIS FATE.

THE COMPLETION OF ALL THE ARRANGEMENTS.

WASHINGTON, June 29 The attempts of the curious to visit the jail to see Guiteau have nearly all been abandoned, for the reason that the jail authorities deny admission to all except a few representatives of the press.

Mr. Hicks told Guiteau that his brother had said he would go to the scaffold with him and stand by till the last moment. Guiteau told him to say to John that he thanked him, adding, "Though John and I quarrelled years ago, and again during my trial, he has always been a friend to me, and I know would always be on hand when I wanted him. John may be peculiar as regards his religious views, but he is all right in every other way, but I'll need no help to go to the scaffold. The Deity will stand by me then as always" It is understood that John Guiteau has told several of the jail people here that he would accompany his brother to the scaffold.

Arrangements for the Execution.

The scaffold has been erected in the northeast corridor of the jail—an apartment 16 by 115 feet and of the whole height of the jail, perhaps 80 feet. The scaffold occupies the extreme northeast portion. It is a substantial Georgia pine structure, painted a pale green. The platform is reached by an ascent of 15 steps, and is large enough to admit of the presence of the prisoner and perhaps six or eight other persons. The drop is so arranged as to show the body to the persons in the corridor. Several of the cells open on the platform, but these will be vacated at the time of execution. The rope runs through a covered trough into one of the cells, and here, hidden from sight, will be the hangman, ready to cut the rope at the signal from the warden, who will be on the platform.

The corridor would accommodate perhaps 200 or 300 persons; the design, however, is to have the execution strictly private. The orders for admission will be restricted to the limitation of the statutes, the jail officers only allowing themselves any latitude of construction in the case of the newspapers. The scaffold could be seen from the outside through a number of windows, but these will be shaded so that no opportunity will thus be afforded either for outside observation or for Guiteau, as he mounts the steps, to take a last view of the landscape.

The telegraphic facilities will be admirable. The Western Union Company are now putting up eight wires to connect with the jail. Each of the press associations will have a special wire and the others will be used by the large number of correspondents resident here and those who are flocking into the city in great numbers from every direction.

Guiteau at Jail.

U. S. JAIL, WASHINGTON, June 29. Judging from external indications Guiteau is to-day less concerned about his execution than any other person about the jail. He seldom alludes to the subject voluntarily, and when he does speak of this sentiments appear so at variance with themselves that it is still a matter of speculation whether he has become convinced that his execution Friday is irrevocably fixed and he has nerved himself to an assumed indifference or that he still entertains the hope and belief that at the last moment something will intervene and save him.

Rev. Dr. Hicks called at the jail last evening and remained with him a few moments. Guiteau said to Dr. Hicks, "I want you to go to the President and tell him if he is going to do anything, I want him to do it at once. I don't want any more Attorney General business and I don't want any reprieving done here Friday morning."

After Hicks left, the guard inquired, "How do you feel?" and Guiteau replied quite cheerily that he felt first rate. He was ready to go any time but had no idea that he would be hung on Friday.

The President will not Interfere.

Rev Dr Hicks was at the White House to-day. He had a short conversation with Private Sec'y Phillips and made no effort to have an interview with the President. He merely called to see if any information was desired from him in reference to the assassin and to hear if there was anything to be communicated in regard to the case. It is stated at the White House that the matter had been disposed of, so far as the President and Cabinet are concerned. So far no final appeal has been made to the President, and it is safe to predict that no further application will be entertained The President has decided not to enter into correspondence with Mrs. Scoville, and he will not answer her last letter. It is reported that Mrs. Scoville intends to call on the President to make a personal appeal in her brother's behalf.

At the District jail there will be a force of soldiers present during the execution of Guiteau.

In an interview to-night Chas. H. Reed says he saw nothing in Guiteau's appearance to indicate he would show weakness or faltering at the execution to-morrow. He might possibly use extravagant language on the scaffold, but he (Reed) would be surprised if any weakness was shown.

"It has been decided," Reed said, "that Guiteau shall be buried in the east wing of the jail. The execution will take place at about half-past one. Guiteau has prepared and will read at the proper time what he calls, 'My dying prayer on the gallows.' The autopsy will take place immediately after the execution."

At midnight Guiteau was in a better frame of mind than during the day and said he expected to enjoy good rest during the remainder of the night.

Invitation to attend the autopsy on Guiteau's body to-morrow has been telegraphed to Dr. Chas. T. Folsom, of Boston, Dr. T. H. Kellogg, of New York, Dr. E C Seguin, of N. Y., Dr. Stearns, of Hartford, Dr. Hammond, of N. Y., Dr. E. C Spitzka, of N. Y., Dr. Lamb, Washington, and other physicians, also to the editor of the Boston Medical Journal.

An Expert affirms the Sanity of Guiteau.

NEW YORK, June 29. Dr. John P. Gray, who was one of the experts called in the Guiteau trial states that he still considers the assassin sane and responsible.

Railroad News.

NEW YORK, June 29. It is stated that the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad Company have completed negotiations for a lease for 99 years, of the New York and New England Air Line Railroad, The latter lease is yet to be ratified.

ALABAMA CLAIMS COMMISSION.

WASHINGTON, June 29. The President has nominated for members of the revived Court of Alabama Claims, Hezekiah G. Wells, of Michigan, presiding Judge, Jas. Harlan, of Iowa, and Asa French, of Mass., Judges, and Daniel W. Fessenden, of Maine, Clerk.

CALIFORNIA.

San Francisco Excited by an Earthquake.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 29. At 5½ o'clock Wednesday morning two distinct earthquakes were felt. The first had hardly passed before the second and heavier one followed, shaking houses quite lively, but doing no damage. At Oakland windows were shaken with much violence. The shake up was considered a heavy one, and it extended over a considerable portion of the country and lasted 30 seconds.

Increased Wages.

BOSTON, June 29. The Boston, Lowell & Concord Railroad to-day increased the wages of freight handlers to $1.50 per day and the men resumed work.

The Eastern and Boston & Maine roads also advanced their freight handlers' pay to the same figure, thus forestalling a strike.

Near Long Branch.

AWFUL SCENES OF SUFFERING.

A Hundred Persons Wounded.

SEVERAL DEAD AND DYING.

LONG BRANCH, June 29. An express train leaving Long Branch at 8:05 this morning met with a terrific accident while crossing a bridge over a branch of the Shrewsbury river near Little Silver station. The accident was no doubt caused by the spreading of the rails. Six cars—four ordinary passenger coaches, a smoking car and a Pullman car—left the rails and ran over the ties of the bridge, tearing them to splinters. The cars kept on the bridge until the train was half way across, when four passenger coaches and a smoking car went over into the water with a terrible crash. The cars landed on their sides in about four feet of water.

The scene that followed beggars description. An unknown man from Ocean Beach was taken out dead. The cars were filled with passengers and a number of the injured are unknown, but there were about a hundred hurt. Mr. Demarest, of the firm of Demarest & Co., New York, was badly injured at the base of the skull; he will die. Wm R. Garrison, son of Commodore Garrison, was terribly hurt on the chest. Chas. M. Woodruff, of Newark, and J. Mitchell, of Scranton, were also seriously injured. It is impossible to get the names of the others at present. All the physicians around the neighborhood have been summoned. Chas. H Foster, fireman of the engine, pulled ex-President Grant out of the smoking car; Grant was not injured. Robert Robertson, iron merchant from New York, who has the Seller cottage here, is injured badly.

Brown, Superintendent of the Erie Rail road, received a severe blow on the head and his back was injured C. J. Fox, of Richmond, Va., had a hand crushed. Jas. E. Mallory, of 202 Broadway, was badly crushed. He cannot recover.

McCall, a brakeman, has his throat badly cut, besides an ugly wound under the right eye and another on his arm. Mr. Mitchell's condition is precarious and he has sustained internal injuries. Mr. Woodruff and Mr. Mallory are about breathing their last. John T. Raymond, the actor, has his collar bone broken and is otherwise severely injured. Mr. Fox, his father-in-law, is severely injured.

The dead man was identified as James L. Bradley, a produce dealer of New York. G. W. Demarest, of New York, is dead. President Gallaway, of the elevated railroad, was slightly injured. Wm. R. Garrison has been unconscious since the accident. He is suffering from concussion of the brain and is at Hollywood Park, the residence of John Hovy. Geo. R. Blanch, Geo. R. Blanchard, Vice President of the New York & E. & Western Railroad, Robert M. Mintom and ex-President Grant are among those on the list of cut and scratched.

NEW YORK, June 29. The following passengers from the Long Branch accident have reached this city this P. M.: H. A. Highly, of No 39 Pearl street, bruised; J. L. Merrill, of East Orange, N. J., internal injuries; Chas. Willard, of 127 West 33d street, New York, arm fractured; W. B Franklin, of Asbury Park, cut in head and lip; J. O. Hark, of No. 5 Union street, Brooklyn, hand cut; F. F. Ketchen Hall, of Trenton, N. J., and Chas. Webb, of Brooklyn, are missing.

There are said to be a number of passengers missing, but none of their names can be ascertained.

The report of John T. Raymond being injured in the accident this morning is not correct. He was not on the train.

Later.—G. W. Demarest, produce dealer of New York, has just died. The other dead man is E. Brady, of New York, whose body is yet lying in an upturned coach awaiting the result of a quarrel between each of three County coroners who claim the body.

The four passengers cars were filled with passengers who were mainly cottagers of Long Branch, Elberon, Asbury, Park and other stations on the New Jersey shore. The train was running at about 30 miles an hour. There was no guard rail on the bridge and the fatal character of the accident is attributed to this omission. Chas. M. Woodruff, of Newark died at noon. Wm. R. Garrison lies at the point of death. Gen. Grant had one knee slightly bruised. About 80 persons were slightly injured either by being hurled over the seats or by being struck by window glass. An inquest is to be held to-morrow.

A PERORATION. The following is the peroration of Hon. George Walker in a case before the U. S. District Court in this city, yesterday, as taken down by a special reporter on the spot:

From the flinty hills of New Hampshire —from the plains of Somerville—from the sea-girted islands of Portland harbor—a great commotion is created. Collectors of customs, inspectors, weighers and gaugers assemble together over a pile of old dead sheep skins and look wise and seriously deliberate over the unfortunate and untimely death of the sheep and lambs who wore these skins.

BODY RECOVERED. The body of Brady, the Winterport young man who was drowned Monday afternoon near Bucksport, was recovered Wednesday at a point near Bucksport narrows, two miles below the village. The scow, by the overturning of which the drowning was caused, was found bottom up on the shore. The men who found it tried to pull the painter out from under the craft, but as the rope pulled hard, they overturned the scow to clear it, and found the body of the young man entangled in the line. The remains were sent to Winterport for interment. The drowning of young Brady was very sad. He was a very capable and industrious man and his untimely death was a very severe blow to his afflicted parents.

A NOVEL CANNON. A small bronze cannon chiefly of Douglass copper, of Blue Hill, and tin from Winslow, in this State, has just been cast by Allamby, and finished at Hinckley & Egery's machine shop. It belongs to Master Fred C. Hamlin, son of Dr. A. C. Hamlin, and the Bangor boys generally, and is intended to be used on public occasions. It is named after Father du Thet, the brave French Priest who fired that single cannon shot in reply to the broadside of the British frigate when Capt. Argall captured the French Colony, at Mt. Desert, in 1612. Du Thet was killed in the fight and was the first victim of the long and bloody war which ceased only with the fall of Quebec. Father du Thet will probably speak on Fourth of July.

Palmer; the opening hymn by Rev. Mr. Eldridge; Scriptures by Rev. Mr. Gerrish; prayer was offered by Rev. Mr. Plummer; very appropriate remarks were made by Rev. Messrs. Palmer, Pilsbury, Church, Prince and Jewell. A very large number of the ministers of the Conference were in attendance. The remains will be buried in the town of Knox to-morrow, where service will be conducted by Rev. Messrs. Jewell, Palmer, Gerrish and others.

STODDARD AT MALMAISON. On the 29th of May, John L. Stoddard paid a visit to Malmaison, a few miles from Paris. This was the favorite home of Napoleon, when General and First Consul, and the place where, as he frequently declared, he spent the happiest hours of his life. Josephine retired to Malmaison after her divorce from the Emperor and died there. The day chosen by Mr. Stoddard for his visit was the anniversary of her death. Though Malmaison itself was quiet and almost deserted, he found many people gathered in the little church of Ryeil, where Josephine is buried, and many floral offerings adorned her marble tomb. The fact that Mr. Stoddard had brought a photographer from America (Mr. Black) to illustrate the history of Josephine at Malmaison, awakened great interest, and every facility for photographing the tomb of the Empress was given. Mr. Stoddard was presented to a faithful attendant of the Bonaparte family, whom Eugenie had sent thither to lay a floral tribute on her grave.

PERSONAL. Among the many graduates of Yale who have come back this year to renew old memories and to meet long absent but never forgotten classmates is Judge John A. Peters, of the Maine Supreme Court, a member of the class of '42. Walking about the campus with a young friend yesterday the judge pointed with pride to the room he once occupied in South Middle, and his twinkling eye, undimmed by the past forty years and the stirring events in which he has been an active force, told eloquently of the pleasant memories which filled his heart. When Judge Peters was a student here the principal manufacture was carriages and the city had hardly more than 20,000 inhabitants. Since that time he has won an enviable reputation as a lawyer, as a representative from the "Old Fourth Maine District," until he voluntarily retired from politics, and has since added to the honorable record of the judiciary of the Pine Tree State the weight and force of his talents and legal training. Those who know Judge Peters personally will echo the wish of the young and admiring friend who yesterday walked about the city with him, that he may live a thousand years. A man of rare personal qualities, of profound legal attainments, he is an honor to the class of '42 and old Yale.—New Haven Palladium, June 27.

STATE COLLEGE.

Closing of Commencement Week—Class Day Exercises—Commencement Dinner.

Yesterday was Class Day and the class graduating Wednesday was honored with the largest attendance at any of the exercises yet held, the commodious town hall, which will seat 800 people, being literally filled to overflowing. All of the pieces were of a high order, and the speaking was sufficiently loud and clear to be distinctly heard without difficulty. The music was by Andrews' Orchestra, of this city, which rendered many choice pieces. Promptly at two o'clock the exercises commenced in accordance with the following

The oration by Mr. Hurd was a protest against war as a means of settling national disputes and an argument for arbitration instead. The poet and philosopher have imagined the destructions of war, but the majority of persons have deemed it well nigh impossible, but when we consider the changes that have been wrought in the human mind, the improvements that have taken place in the moral and physical world, the abrogation of various barbarous laws and customs, and above all the positive declaration of Scripture that war shall cease from the land, there can be brought forward no reason why the great task may not be attempted with every prospect of success. A progressive wave has swept over the nations of the world and war has now come to be regarded as the head of all human calamities. Millions die by the sword, but they are as nothing compared with the countless multitudes which die by disease which ever follows in the track of human strife. Its distinguishing feature is not that man is slain, but he is crushed by its injustice, treachery and cruelty. Under its influence man forgets himself and assumes the attributes of a beast of prey. The cold-hearted indifferences engendered is even more shocking than the wrongs it calls forth. Formerly all disputes were settled by the sword, but we now find negotiations and arbitrations taking the place of the barbarous custom. Now the law of nations declares that "the continuation of peace is the greatest good to which a nation can aspire." As individuals settle their disputes without resort to violence, let nations do the same. Nations are bound by moral obligations as well as individuals. Is not reason a safer guide to equity than the sword? What shall be the mode of arbitration? Summon a congress of nations and let it establish a system of international law to which all shall be subject, and which shall be superior to national law. Thus shall war be abrogated and cease wronging the human heart.

CLASS HISTORY.

In history proper the historiographer must be careful to impartially present all the phases of the subject under consideration, but in that branch known as class history one is allowed a certain latitude, a poetic license as it were, similar to that exercised by John S. C. Abbott in writing his Napoleon.

Proceeding, he says it is a mistaken idea that college life is monotonous. The selection of the historiographer prelude an exact account of all the scrapes of the class, as he was entirely unconcious of all the various attempts at larceny, burglary and arson, as well as all other violations of college laws. He then gives, in his own facetious way, a short account of some of the ridiculous pranks of some members of the class, and closes with a summary as follows: Average age 22 years, 4 months; average height 5 ft., 10 in.; average weight 159¼ pounds. On financial theories the class stands: protection, 5; limited protection, 8; free trade, 7; undecided, 2. Politics: Republican, 18; Independent Republican, 1; Democrats, 2; Greenback, 1. Religious views: Universalist, 5; Unitarian, 2; Congregationalist, 2; Methodist, 1; Spiritualist, 1; Undecided, 11; number engaged, 1; doubtful, 1; ought to be, 9 Tallest man, Kimball, 6 feet, 4 in. Shortest man, Woodward, 5 feet, 4 in. Heaviest man, Starret, 192; lightest, Gould, 130. Popular man, Hurd; beloved man, Starrett; studying man, Wight; best moustache, Fuller. Each man has his nickname, some of which are Bottle, Buggy, D. C., Steve, Dick Coaster, Slim Jim, Sissie, Teetir, Huldah, Billy, Bear, Long Tom, Chucky, Sockabasin, Swamp Angel, Skate, Jonah.

The poem was short, but finely rendered and received with pleasure.

The prophecy abounded in hits at the ludicrous situations in which the members will be found a few years hence and was heartily enjoyed by the audience.

The Valedictorian took for the theme of his parting address, Character. After a pleasant allusion to the College days spent in acquiring an education, he remarks that each will now no doubt choose a pathway in life, each will strive for success, but the one thing which taken with others will most surely bring success, is a good character. Without it there is no real success. Talent is by no means rare, nor genius; but can they always be trusted? Character is the qualification which commands the esteem and respect, and secures the confidence of others. A man is of consequence in the world when it is known that he can be relied on. Thus reliability becomes the passport to the confidence of mankind. It is because of this controlling power in character, that we often see men exercise an amount of influence apparently out of all proportion to their intellectual endowments. Circumstances and surrounding influence and character is of slow growth. Work is one of the best educators of practical character, all that is great comes through it. Success is not to be achieved in a day. Nearly every great truth has had to fight its way to recognition in the face of persecution. A firm character is only strengthened by opposition, and a difficulty once overcome gives new strength to overcome others. The whole end and aim of life should be the development of a strong, symmetrical beautiful character. And now my classmates before we part, let us each resolve that in our future course in life, wherever we may go, whatever we may do, that our aim shall be to so mould our character, that it shall be marked for its purity, firmness and adherence to the right. If this is accomplished we shall live happy and useful lives, honor ourselves, our class, our college; and the world will be better for our having lived in it.

The class ode was written by F. H. Todd. While this was sung, Miss A. P. Heald presided at the piano.

COMMENCEMENT CONCERT.

The audience comprised many from this city and other friends of the graduating class, all of whom were delighted and many fairly captivated by the charming rendering of many of the numbers. A SPECIAL ATTRACTION FOR THE FOURTH OF JULY.

A United States War Steamer to Visit our Harbor.

A private despatch received by us yesterday afternoon affords the pleasure of announcing that in addition to the other attractions offered in Bangor on the coming Fourth of July, we are to be favored by a visit to our harbor by the elegant United States War Steamship Yantic, of the North Atlantic squadron, which will arrive within a few days, and remain here over the National anniversary.

The Yantic is attached to the cruising squadron of the North Atlantic, and being now on her regular cruise along the New England coast, the Secretary of the Navy, Hon. William E. Chandler, has courteously acceded to the request that the vessel be permitted to visit our port to enable the large number of patriotic citizens of the interior of this section of the State, who will come to Bangor on Independence Day, to see a real American Man-of-War.

The Yantic was anchored below the city several days last year, and her return will be warmly welcomed by our citizens. She is a fine vessel and will form a special attraction on the Fourth, when opportunity will be afforded to visit her. It is also hoped that a portion of the Yantic's crew may participate in the military parade, so that both the Army and Navy may be represented in the procession.

Arrangements are in progress for the hospitable entertainment of the officers of the Yantic during her stay in our harbor.

Police Court.

Lizzie Barry, for drunkenness and disturbance, was sentenced to jail for 90 days.

POETIC IMITATION OF WORDSWORTH, BYRON AND BURNS.

[The following is the admirable poem delivered by Dr Edward M Field at the reunion of the Bowdoin Alumni, Thursday evening, June 22d]

Whether in vision of the night,
Or dreamy reverie by day,
It matters not, a wondrous sight
Entranced and filled me with a bright
Unfading joy alway

I saw the sainted Sons of Song,
The echo of whose silent lyres
Still o er our dearest memories throw
A soft, half sad lament, mellow glow,
Then mournfully expires.

Forth from the shadowy Past appears
One living loved, and dead revered,
The homely face by thought refined,
A face transfigured by the mind
Deep drinker at Castalia's fount,
The poet-sage of Rydal Mount.
Again the tenant of the Lake
To keener life and love awake,
They bear once more the master's voice,
And in its tuneful notes rejoice,
Even his wonted walk in fear
Along the banks of Windermere
He speaks —and Nature's throbbing breast
Lies listless in the calm of rest,
At once are hushed the tender lay,
The zephyr soothes itself away,
The ripples no sense kiss the shore,
And all things wait to hear once more
The tones that ravished them of yore —

WORDSWORTH log

Oft have I (I crest since the light
Supernal on my spirit fell,
Whether the man with cultured mind
A purer joy could I feel or find
Than simple hearted Peter Bell

I knew a subtle weaver once
Of thoughts beyond conception rare,
He blended threads of Paradise
With many a rich and weird device,
And formed a whole divinely fair

And yet the mirror of his soul
So finely polished, took the breath
O blind detraction, and no more
A clear and untroubled surface bore,
Till brightened by the dew of Death

And how I felt the tresses grow
Above the grave his sweet soul slept,
The gold of genius, whose genius shone
With the sweet fancies that the throne
Of Poesy mourned its young king dead!

The . almost thou that could not float
Above the pure depths of his soul,
I that I saw dark shadows there,
Sweet Hope succumb to fell Despair,
And Death itself the welcome goal

. . . .

And yet an inner fire-ere I glow—
. . . a string of a hidden fire,
Illumed and cheers the poet's way,
He only feels he must obey
And light his own funeral pyre!

He ceased, and I one whom listening ear
To Nature's loving heart lay near
Might catch the soft and lauding cheers
(And I like to common ears)
Of the Nine . the Nerve I throng
That grace the famous Lakes of song,
While in the banks the Dryads chant
The feeling strain from tree to plant,
But no age I with their joyous notes,
A strain of untold sadness floats,
Each ball the melody is brought
Like a too seem in solving view,
Till I pause for many a year,
Then a tear that woke the smile or tear,
Is to be seen on Windermere!

. . . .

The Abbey church was dark and dim,
And silent for the cloister by man
Of the vestal old baronial bowers,
With no echo in the countless hours
Has darkly stained the old knights stalls,
And worn the tablets on the walls —
Has seen efficacy and bust
. . . home with a shroud of dust,—
Has borne beyond the tempest's power—
Beyond the battle's feedless shower,
The dark and gloomy drooping low
. . . loneliness of woe
. . . to the Holy Land,
. . . by knightly hand
. . . flight the breath
. . . Death,
. . . shaft and stone
. . . unknown.
. . . of flowers,
. . . hours
. . . glow
. . . below.

BYRON

Jehovah! Heavens what a combination!
In the Almighty's . . . crime,
Can there be on . . .
As I conceived my . . .
Has ear and letters . . .
For I may sea . . .
For Jacob at a . . .
Alas! . . . to . . .

I came to cleave again the sod in mold,
And summon a monument,
To think how spirits with the sweetest of old,
And take the charnel lethargy off of us,
The pleasures sinful to behold
The fruits of it now, the fools that scoff at us,
But these have dwelt immortal of the renial,
Long time and love in mansions monumental.

But why the world been long, since long ago
In storied cornice made my last endeavor?
For I whom the Hellespont, you know
Was rowed by Lord of the Stygian river,
Who's perfumed praises now, and all aglow,
And, what the critic cursed who deals in poison
And sets the snarling curs and smaller boys on!

Ere I descend among the shades I plow,
The tyrants of two or races would relieve me,
The one on him who bared my limb to know
The only secret which to know would grieve me,
The other of the vampire, Ma lame Stowe
Who has my scorn and heartiest curse, believe me
She resurrected sinners just to stone 'em,
In . . . "—nil mortuis nisi bonum!"

Yet along the quiet wall,
Pleasant thoughts mighty stalk,
. . . shall grow faint and die,
. . . defeat silence lie
. . . no word
. . . mass stirred,
. . . well known tones
. . . and rattling bones,
. . . tomb a light
. . . strangely bright,
. . . disappeared —
. . . I and word

'Twas nightfall on the "Banks of Doon,"
I saw in the west the crescent moon
In the soft gloaming joined its light
To stay the shadow of coming night,
The mavis sang its vesper lay,
As nature to the dying day
The heather and the wild flowers fair,
Shed sweetness, scented sweet the air,
And from Ben Lomond's lofty height,
A soft breeze cooled the brow of night
A consciousness of loss, which Will,
Or Love itself, can never fill,
A ceaseless feeling of suspense,
Which watching only makes intense,
Thus, this is pain, exquisite, keen,
Forever waiting the unseen)
As in the days of seer and sage,
The dear old mythologic age,
The groves resounded far and near
The name of one supremely dear,
Hylas the lost, whom Naiads drew
Beneath the Mysian waters blue,
In vain they call, and eager list,
With bated breath, the voice they missed,
In vain —to grace his native shore
The gentle Hylas comes no more
As too the fair Endymion sleeps
On breezy Latmus mountain steeps.

And of him tidings none may glean,
Save a fair lover, sweet Selene,
And Carian maidens sigh in vain
For him who never comes again,
So, could we only break the sleep
Of him whose vigils angels keep,—
Could we with every power combined,
Our Hylas and Endymion find,—
Could strong desire fruition bring,
Make light and joy from sorrow spring,
Then he for whom our spirit yearns,
Would come again—THE IMMORTAL BURNS!
It is not strange the hour and place,
So full of beauty's tender grace,
Should lure from Heaven itself awhile
His eager glance and winning smile,
He comes!—with quick and rapturous gaze
The dear and well known scene surveys—
The moonlit stream—the banks—the braes,
And thus he breathed in Nature's ear,
The words that Nature loved to hear—

BURNS log

I've met the "dear departed shade"
To whom my heart was given,
Without a "leaning ray" the beams
The brightest star in Heaven,
The love that fired my youthful breast
Among the fragrant hedges,
With glorious fulness has redeemed
Its precious earthly pledges!

Be it an undeveloped bud
That scents the ruin hoary,
Or lodging warbler of the grove,
Too young to sing its story;
Sweet human love for earthly things
Is never vainly given,—
The bud will blossom to a rose,
The bird will sing in Heaven!

Not roller pleasures can efface
The scenes I loved so dearly,
The "winding Ayr" beside whose stream
I mourned my love so early,—
And "Bonnie Doon" whose flowery banks
Are imaged on the river,
And jewelled in whose loveliness
Are thoughts that glow forever!

A tender sadness lingers yet
Oh "Afton" gently flowing,
The embers of a fond regret
Deep in my heart are glowing,
I mean no disrespect to those
Above who sing forgiven,
But sure my loved one's soul believes
The Scotia's next to Heaven!

He ceased,—and mists of golden hue
Around his form their bright folds drew,
And as he gently rose the air
Was resonant with music rare
Of birds he dearly loved to praise
In the old dim and dreamy days,
And wild flowers waited to his feet
His favorite incense strangely sweet
The songs are ended, and the flowers
Are odorless and pale, the bowers
Have borrowed darkness of the night;
There I ngers yet the ghostly light,
Of the last sinking crescent moon,
And silence broods o'er "Bonnie Doon."

LATEST NOTES ABOUT THE FASHIONS.

[From the N Y Evening Post]

Prune de monsieur is the name of the new French shade of mauve

White "Indiana" silk is a sheeny finish vogue is made odious by calling it sang de bœuf

The very handsome shade of red now in vogue is made odious by calling it sang de boeuf.

White "Indiana" silk is a sheeny material much used for evening dress for young girls.

Wall flowers and shaded geraniums, made of velvet, are much used to adorn hats and bonnets of straw.

Imitation pink pearls are now carved out of very pale-tinted coral and these so closely resemble the real pearl that the eye of an expert is needed to detect the difference

Beautiful wash-costumes are made of sheer light-colored cern batiste, or Saxony muslin, the skirt being trimmed with embroidered flounces and shirrings and the waist with embroidered bands and narrow flounces to match.

Black will be very fashionably worn all summer. Handsome toilets of silk, satin, or grenadine being profusely trimmed with jet bands, special ornaments, and jetted lace, or relieved by a bright color, as preferred

Jaunty looking corsages for young girls are shown, made of tinted satin, to be worn over skirts of white surah, nuns' veiling, or French muslin, adorned with embroideries. They are high at the throat, with Marguerite sleeves reaching to the elbow. In front they are open all the way down, but laced together over a chemisette of silk embroidered tulle, with silken cords the color of the corsage material. For older persons this style is reproduced in fabrics of velvet or moire.

The tight fitting habit basque of Pekin, or, in other words, of satin and velvet stripe alternating, is still a garment that meets with much favor, many ladies not caring for the "independent" jacket of moire, while those of brocade, whether of silk or velvet, have been literally "done to death." The Pekin fabric, if not new, has never become so commonly worn, and has also the indubitable merit of wearing admirably.

A very handsome carriage costume is made of fawn colored French cashmere, with pointed corsage and Watteau train, over and underskirt of dark fawn colored moire, box plaited to the waist. A long Spanish carriage cloak of fawn colored vigogne is lined with scarlet satin, with elegant trimmings of fawn-colored and bronze chenille around the neck and oddly shaped sleeves. The bonnet, of golden fawn colored straw, is trimmed with surah of a shade to match and a cluster of scarlet ostrich tips, veiled by three drooping ostrich tips of fawn color tipped with bronze

For skirt trimmings one wide flounce headed by several small ones two narrow knife-plaited frills, headed by a wide, fulling bouillonné, and several small flounces or the skirt covered to the knees by alternate narrow frilles and puffings are the favorite styles Above these skirt trimmings—set on in whatever manner they may be—is the inevitable scarf, draped around straight a la Espagnole, or shirred in the centre and arranged en panier. In very rich materials the skirt is usually plain, the only trimming consisting of a full wide garniture around the bottom, three puffings, with a fluted edge each way, a double box-plaited flounce lined with a contrasting color, or a coquille ruche, feathery and full, being three popular modes of forming this trimming.

A young lady, a handsome brunette, attracted considerable attention recently by driving through Central Park in a little gold colored phaeton She was dressed in a striking costume of "Pharoah" red satin, draped with black Spanish lace, with bright glimpses of the unveiled satin showing here and there on the bodice and upper portion of the overdress. Attached to the phaeton was an immense canopy of red satin, lined with "sunset" brocade and edged with a deep ruffle of yellow Breton lace. The lady wore an Alsatian peasant's hat of immense brim and high towering crown, covered with red and gold-colored feathers laid one over the other alternately. Long Mousquetaire driving gloves of deep yellow were drawn on over the close red satin sleeves and at her throat was pinned a bunch of yellow cowslips

Perfect "loves of bonnets" are imported for summer wear, and the range in style and adornment is almost without limit First, for the very youthful faces, are the capotes and Gypsy shaped bonnets of white or tinted crape adorned with flowers so perfect in color and so natural in shape as to excel, if such a thing can be, the handiwork of Nature herself. A beautiful bonnet from Virot's, in the Gypsy shape, is made of ivory crape, lined inside with sea-shell pink surah, veiled with the crape Outside is set a garland of perfumed roses, with buds, stems, thorns, and tender green foliage mingling with the soft folds of the crape. Another bonnet of mauve-tinted crape glitters with a wreath of white carnations, covered with a crystallization which glitters like diamonds in the sunlight, and a thread of almond-covered crepe de chene is trimmed with moresque lace, tea roses, and ox eyed daisies. Next in attractiveness are the dainty shirred silk bonnets, in every conceivable shade of color, trimmed with feather tips, roses, and loops and strings of satin ribbon. Then come the more practical looking bonnets of cactus lace, Sumatra, bamboura, Italian, and English straw, in shapes and trimmings each beautiful in themselves, and becoming and graceful enough to make a plain woman look pretty, and a pretty one positively "angelic."

Quaintness and picturesqueness is still the aim in the dressing of children, and summer costumes now exhibited designed for them show all the artistic beauty and dainty effect which characterized their winter toilets, the only difference being in the texture, which at present is, of course, more delicate and airy. The Mother Hubbard and Kate Greenaway are still copied for quite young children, and often inappropriately for children of larger growth, who, with elongated limbs and unchildlike faces, simply burlesque this pretty fashion. Among commendable and stylish fabrics for little girls' dresses are chene silks with finely moired grounds, over which are scattered tiny bouquets and garlands. There are also shepherds' check silks in the plain colors, the most popular being those of pale blue, dark green, brown, or violet, checked with white. These silks are usually combined with some monochrome color, in satin merveilleux or surah, these latter materials forming panniers, sash, collar, vest, and cuffs. The new foulard patterns, some of which are chene and pin-checks divide favor with the particularly designed for the little people, Lace is used upon the last mentioned fabrics with charming effect. In white goods piqué and marseilles are again in favor. These are trimmed with embroidery or braid which will bear the test of the laundry. In lighter materials are very sheer nainsooks and French muslins, to be trimmed with Irish point, and lastly, for cold days, are pretty suits of white cloth, trimmed with soutache braid and fancy cords and buttons.

An odd toilet, made for a lady in Newport, is a black and gold brocaded foulard silk, with plaited flounces edged with buttercup yellow lace, headed by a band of black velvet, put on bias of the goods. The short tunic, with full Buckingham puffs over the hips, is trimmed to correspond, and the Camargo bodice has a deep collar and wide turnover cuffs of black velvet, edged with yellow lace. A Tuscan straw bonnet in the Langtry shape, trimmed over the crown with flots of wide black velvet ribbon, and inside with a tiny wreath of primroses, and a black and gold foulard parasol, trimmed with yellow lace, are en suite.

After spun silk hose, the first choice are the lisle-thread stockings, which come in all the new shades of mastic, crushed strawberry, silver gray, deep orange, bronze, laurel green, Burgundy, cadet blue, and claret, as well as the more delicate shades of water green, pearl, cameo, flesh, mauve, and many other exquisitely delicate tints. Black hose are in great demand, as well as those of dark green and mouse gray, three shades which are in high vogue with ladies of fine tastes. Aside from hose of a monochrome color, are an endless variety of fancy ribbed, plaided, striped, and polka-dotted patterns, which accord exactly with many of the dress effects in color and pattern. The fashion of wearing the very low-cut Louis XIV. slippers, or Grecian sandals, which display so much of the stocking, has caused a great demand for those elaborately decorated in both fanciful and artistic designs. As a result, there has been a lively competition among the manufacturers, and stockings which were but lately to be found in a few standard dyes now appear in every conceivable shade of color, and ornamented in the most novel and striking manner. Choosing a stocking to harmonize with the costume is much followed, and in the latest dyes are to be found all the fashionable, æsthetic shades noticeable in dress fabrics, both in pale and dark colors. In anticipation of the demand for dainty openwork and other fancy hose, to be worn with delicate summer costumes, unusual preparation has been made, and besides this great attention has been paid to the manufacture of stockings for general wear in the matter of durability as well as fineness of texture. Children's hosiery follows very closely in design and color the styles brought out for older persons but as a rule children do not wear elaborately ornamented or openwork hose

SAD ACCIDENT.

Mr. OSCAR CRAIG Blown up by a Premature Blast in the Rosendale Cement Quarry—Destruction of an Eye—Its Subsequent Removal by Surgical Operation.

Mr. Oscar Craig was foreman in a cement quarry at Rosendale, Ulster Co., N. Y. By an explosion one day in the quarry he lost an eye—lost it totally. Under the impression that the matter was less serious, the local physician told Mr. Craig that his eye was not lost wholly but could be saved by treatment. The experiment was tried and failed. Worse remained behind, for he was in danger of losing the other also through sympathetic inflammation. In this strait he consulted Dr. DAVID KENNEDY, of Rondout, N. Y., who told him the injured eye must be taken out to save the other. To this Mr. Craig demurred, and went back home in doubt. His local physician said "Go to New York." To New York the patient went, and one of the most eminent oculists in the country, having looked at the case, said "You have lost one eye entirely, go back and to what you can to save the other." Directly, Dr. Kennedy removed the ruined eye and treated Mr. Craig with "KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY" to build up the system, and the result was successful.

Dr. Kennedy's great success as a Surgeon is due to the use of "Favorite Remedy" in the after treatment.
